The Story of Saint Patrick

by James A. Janda

A little boy liked to sit on a hill and watch the boats come and go in and out of the harbor. His name was Patrick.

He liked to run down to the pier. He liked to watch the fishermen bring in their boats loaded with fish.

Patrick lived on the shore of England facing the Irish Sea.

He wore a toga and sandals, because he was a citizen of Rome.

He lived there a very long time ago - in the fifth century.

Patrick had to learn his prayers just as you and I. But, to tell the truth, young Patrick was more interested in playing than in learning.

He liked to climb trees, pick apples, and play with his dog.

Patrick had a happy time until he turned sixteen.

Then something happened that made him very sad.

From the top of the hill, he saw it all coming. Nial, the Celtic warrior, and his enemy boats were coming into the harbor.

Nial's warriors attacked the town. They killed many people. They burned the homes.

They stole horses, pigs and sheep. They captured Patrick, forced him into a boat, and sailed across the sea to Ireland. In Ireland, Patrick was sold as a slave.
